and when I open the newly created files with size 111MB it is empty, not the original source file. When I import the image to online photo editors like photobucket and even on photoshop it says, "this file format isn't supported" How can I convert this file? A: Cannot convert to .png or it will be very, very large size (I would expect the size of .png can not exceed 4GB). KSD to PNG is impossible (did you test it?) Since the file is corrupted, converting to .JPG is feasible. However the big size can be a problem. I do not recommend converting it to .JPG, .JPG is actually a special form (compression algorithm) of .JPG. So if you convert to .JPG, the size will be the same and also you lost the quality (not only the image, but also the metadata). A BIG size of the.JPG file can make a site slower, so I suggest you to test your site before uploading the high quality images. Remove the.JPG file from KSD. Upload it again. If it didn't affect your site, it will not be a problem. If you want to preserve the metadata of the original file, remove all the images from the folder and save it as.xlsx. And you can upload it again (or convert it to.jpg if you are not allowed to upload). PS: Microsoft saves the metadata for image files with its own formats.

Q: Multiple instances with 1 object Angular 2 I'm new to Angular2 development. I've been making 2 page real-time application using angular2 and meteor. Now i've been trying to use ReactJS in my app for the dashboard page. In my Meteor app, when i use ReactJS i can only have single instance for any component. I've been learning from It said: "Avoid the copy and paste technique, you will be able to create a single instance of the App component, and this will be available across every Angular2 application. Any component or directive in your templates will share the same instance of App" is that still possible? How should i manage this? I know meteor is
